P R E F A C E

THE undersigned offers to the public in the following pages a work which, he trusts, will not only be acceptable, but highly valuable to many of his fellow-citizens.

The numerous and constant inquiries at the printing establishments and public offices for something of a similar character, induced him, some months since, to engage in its compilation, and, after much labour, he now presents it to the judgment of an enlightened community, confident that its merits will be justly appreciated.

It contains the names and residence of all the fortunate drawers in the Land Lottery of the Cherokee country, arranged by districts in numerical order, and a map of each district, all carefully copied from the originals in the Executive Department and the office of the Surveyor General, designating also the lots which have been granted.

He has given the quality of the lots in some instances, but not generally, deeming it altogether unimportant, from the well known inaccuracy of the surveyors in classing their value, and from the additional fact that very few individuals engage in contracts for real estate until they are enabled by personal observation to place a proper estimate upon the premises.

By reference to the numerical list, the drawer's name and residence can be readily ascertained, while the maps will give a pretty correct idea of the watercourses and local situation of any particular lot, as well as whether it has been granted or not.

To those who drew land in this lottery—who are desirous of obtaining settlements in that section of the state—and more particularly to those who are extensively engaged in the purchase and sale of lots, this work is particularly recommended.

The materials for publication having been prepared principally by himself, and the printing having been executed under his personal superintendence, he feels assured that its accuracy may be relied on.

In conclusion, he deems it due to his subscribers and the public to offer an explanation for the delay in bringing out the work, which has been occasioned by circumstances beyond his control; to wit, the fulfilment of other imperious obligations, which engrossed a longer portion of his time than he could reasonably have anticipated; for which, he entertains no doubt, due allowance will be made.

JAMES F. SMITH.

Milledgeville, Geo., April 19, 1838.

FOREWORD

The last, or 1832 Land Lottery of Georgia, made available for distribution and settlement that part of the Cherokee Indian Nation which was in Georgia. This was a large area generally north of the Chattahoochee River in the north west and north central parts of the state. There were two distinct areas involved in this Lottery. One part was the area referred to as the gold lots, lying along the south boundary of the subject area, and the other part was referred to as the land lots. This book deals only with the land lots as shown on the map following the Foreword.

Georgia's western and northern boundary had been established in 1802 by the cession of her western territory, from the Chattahoochee River to the Mississippi, to the United States. Although this cession had provided for the peaceful removal of all Indians within these boundaries, in 1828, the Cherokee still remained. Despite the fact the Cherokee were a peaceful and agricultural people, in that year Georgia extended her jurisdiction over them and named the area Cherokee County. Shortly thereafter, the General Assembly, by the Acts of December 21, 1830 and December 24, 1831, authorized the land to be surveyed and distributed by Lottery to citizens of Georgia. In 1832 the surveyors laid off the area in four sections, the sections into land districts about nine miles square, and the land districts into land lots of 40 and 160 acres respectively.

While the surveying was being carried out, those persons who had lived in Georgia three years immediately prior to the Acts of the General Assembly, registered to draw in the Lottery in their counties of residence. Their names, together with the numbers of the lots and districts, were sent to Milledgeville, then the capital of the state, and on specified days tickets from two wheels or drums were drawn simultaneously, one from the wheel holding the name tickets and one from the drum holding the land lot tickets. In this way, a person knew which lot he had drawn and if he subsequently paid to the state a grant fee of $18.00, a grant was issued to the lot he had drawn. This grant from the State of Georgia was his title to the lot and from that time he could do whatever he wished with his property, although the state did not require that he live on it or cultivate it.

Revolutionary War veterans were given extra draws and were indicated by the letters "R.S." written after their names. Many other classifications are indicated by initials, such as widows, insane, orphans, idiots, illegitimates, etc. Ordinary married men with their families, or bachelors, etc, are not designated by any initial. All citizens participating in this and other Lotteries had to take only an ORAL oath when they registered to draw. Consequently, there are no written records as to what they may have said about themselves and their families.

Immediately after the Lottery of 1832 was held, the whole area of Cherokee County was divided into ten counties, i.e., Cass (which was renamed Bartow in 1861), Cherokee, Cobb, Floyd, Forsyth, Gilmer, Lumpkin, Murray, Paulding and Union, all of which were created in 1832. However, the original survey and grant records in the Surveyor General Department of the Office of the Secretary of State, always use the name of the original county—Cherokee.

The 1832 Land Lottery opened up the last area within the present boundaries of Georgia, which heretofore had not been available to the white settlers and was participated in by more persons than any other Lottery.

In spite of the distributing of the lands in the area, it was not fully settled at first. It was not until a Treaty with the United States and the Cherokee Nation on December 29, 1835 held at New Echota in Georgia, that the Cherokee finally agreed to leave their lands and move west beyond the Mississippi River. Soon after Georgians came in in large numbers and not an Indian was left within her boundaries.

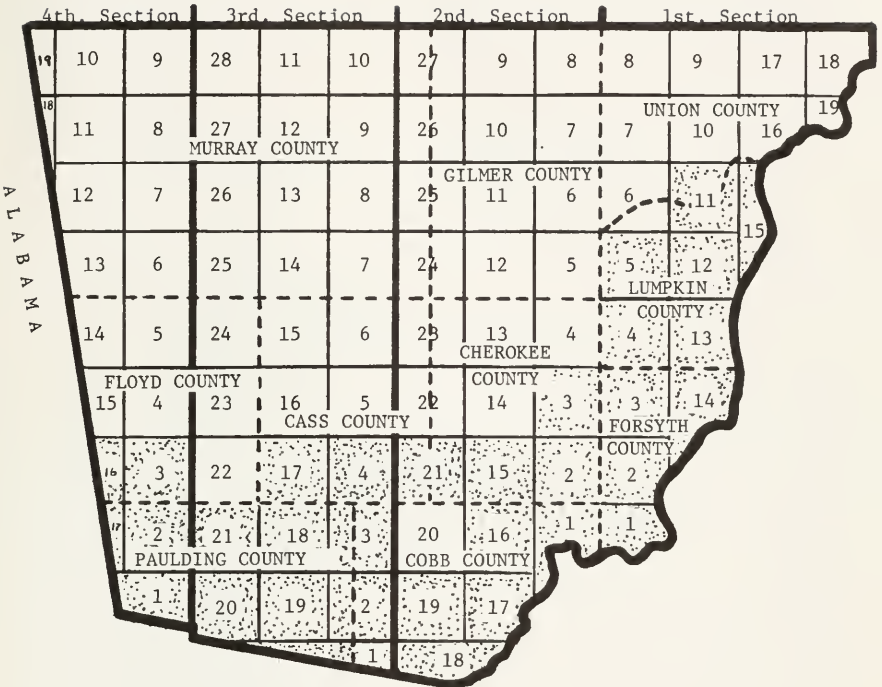

Some time in the future The State Dept. of Archives and History in Atlanta hopes to publish the 1832 Gold Lottery, but in the meantime, please do not ask the Surveyor General Department to search for names in these records, since they do not have a general index. If one knows the county in which a person was living at the time of holding the Lottery, a search will be made by the Surveyor General Dept. in that county for one specific person.

THE LAND AREA OF THE CHEROKEE LOTTERY

The numbered squares showing dots are the gold districts and the numbered squares without the dots are the land districts. This book shows only those who drew lots in the land districts. The ten counties shown are those created in 1832 immediately after the Land Lottery. The broken lines show the boundaries of the ten counties.
