Preface

THE East Genesee Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was in existence for about a quarter of a century. During that time more than four hundred ministers were members of it, and labored as Methodist ministers do. Then the Conference was blotted out, and left no successor. Its records it is the duty of no one to perpetuate. The records of an existing Conference are too often neglected, but about one which has ceased to be there is something peculiarly pathetic.

For some years the East Genesee Conference has strongly appealed to me, although I never had the remotest connection with it, and it passed out of being before I had ever learned its name. Seven years ago I began a careful compilation of its matter for publication, and in a year or two had most of the contemplated work done, but the pressure of many duties retarded the work, and delayed its completion until now.

In publishing so much of detail it is useless to expect there are no errors, but I trust they are neither many nor great.

The Rev. Freeborn G. Hibbard, D. D., wrote a History of East Genesee Conference, which was published by the Methodist Book Concern in 1887, but is now out of print. It consists largely of reminiscences contributed by pastors, and reveals very closely the spirit of the workers of that day.

RAY ALLEN.

Its Origin

THE East Genesee Conference was created in May, 1848, by action of the General Conference then being held in Pittsburg, Pa. It was formed entirely from territory which had previously belonged to the Genesee Conference.

Genesee Conference at its greatest extent, after 1812, was a vast triangle, including such widely separated places as Detroit, Wilkes-Barre and Quebec. In 1824, all Canada and beyond was taken from it to form the Canada Conference, but the Genesee, developing rapidly, was still too large. In 1829 all its territory east of Cayuga Lake was cut off, to form the Oneida Conference, but growth still continued and in a few years the territory yet remaining began to be considered too large for one Conference. At its annual session in 1846, a resolution was presented favoring another division, but it was laid on the table for a year, that the ensuing General Conference might be nearer at hand. In 1847 the subject was again taken up, and thoroughly discussed. It was generally agreed that the Conference was too large. Only three Annual Conferences in Methodism were larger, and of these the New York and the Ohio were divided at the General Conference of 1848, and the Baltimore four years later. Accordingly resolutions were passed recommending the General Conference to divide the Conference substantially on the line of the Genesee river, and requesting that the western part be called Genesee and the eastern part East Genesee. Other resolutions were passed providing, in case of the division, for an equal division of the Conference funds, an equal division as near as might be of the superannuated preachers living outside Conference bounds, an equal representation on the Board of Trustees of Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, and fixing the next meeting of the Genesee Conference at Buffalo and the first meeting of the East Genesee Conference at Rochester.

The memorials from Genesee Conference were presented to the General Conference, and were referred in due course to the Committee on Boundaries, which gave them favorable consideration. That Committee reported it May 26, its report was adopted, and so East Genesee Conference came into being.

Its Territory

THE territory of the East Genesee Conference was thus described by the General Conference which created it: "East Genesee Conference shall contain all that part of the state of New York west of the Black River and Oneida Conferences, and east of the Genesee river, including the whole of the city of Rochester, together with so much of the state of Pennsylvania as is embraced in the Seneca Lake and Wellsborough districts, and Ulysses circuit."

This is not an altogether satisfactory delineation of territory, and it is made not much more definite by the description given of the boundaries of the other two Conferences named. But it was bounded on the north by Lake Ontario, on the east by the Black River and the Oneida Conferences, on the south by the Baltimore Conference, and on the west by the Genesee Conference. The east line was practically the east line of Wayne county, Cayuga lake, and the Susquehanna river. Its south line was not far from the southern boundaries of Bradford and Tioga counties in Pennsylvania. Its west line was the Genesee river, but including all of Rochester.

So the East Genesee Conference was about 125 miles long, had an average width of about 75 miles, and contained something more than 9,000 square miles. It was an attractive territory, comprising the greater part of the charming lake region of central New York, and the beautiful valleys of the Chemung, the Cohocton, and the Genesee. At the north was the level and fertile land bordering Lake Ontario, and at the south were the mountains and forests of Pennsylvania.

At the time East Genesee Conference begins its career pioneering had already ceased, and the first railways were running. The forests were largely cleared away, and the country districts were peopled about as now. The villages, however, were much smaller, and the cities had hardly begun their growth.

Its Growth

A study of its statistics, as given elsewhere in this volume, will show that the East Genesee Conference had a steady growth, almost without interruption. Between its first report, in 1848, and its last, in 1871, the members of Conference increased from 115 to 200; its church members from 15423 to 23262; its number of Sunday Schools from 242 to 358; and its number of Sunday School scholars from 10581 to 22463.

How encouraging this growth was is best appreciated by a comparison with its neighbor on the west, the Genesee Conference, from which it was separated at its organization. Neither Conference, during the period under consideration, underwent any change of boundaries.

During this period then—1848 to 1871—the East Genesee Conference increased in church members 50.8 per cent., and in Sunday School scholars 112.3 per cent. During the same period the Genesee Conference increased its number of Sunday School scholars only 67.7 per cent., and its number of church members actually decreased 10.3 per cent.! Apparently East Genesee had lived in comparative peace and quietude, little disturbed by Naziritism and other troubles which had made life in old Genesee so strenuous.

Its Pastoral Support

THE first report—that of 1848—which was made by East Genesee Conference on pastoral support is an interesting study. The several amounts received for “Quarterly Claim,” for “Table Expenses,” for “House Rent,” and for “Traveling Expenses” are reported separately, and then the total claim, the total amount received, and the deficiency, if any, are also given.

The “Quarterly Claim” is usually the largest amount. The greatest amount allowed any one is $344, and the lowest $100. For “Table Expenses” the highest allowed any pastor is $308.50, although one presiding elder, presumably with a great appetite, is allowed $320. The lowest allowed any is $34, which would not seem to recommend his house as a boarding place. The greatest amount allowed for “House Rent” is $186, in the city of Rochester, and the lowest is $10, except that some have no allowance for this purpose. For “Traveling Expenses” the highest allowance is $50, and the lowest $1, although many have nothing. Evidently some of these preachers must have walked in, carrying their possessions in a red bandana.

Of the total amounts paid that year the five presiding elders received severally as follows: $575, $530, $479, $443, and $277.74. Of the total amounts paid pastors, only eight charges reached $500 or more, as follows. West Rochester, $703.50; East Rochester, $700; Elmira, $600; Canoga, $585; Geneva, $525; Palmyra, $511; Penfield, $500; Waterloo, $500. Of this number the latter was the only one with a parsonage. The lowest paid any member of the Conference was $133, although one supply received only $75,

At this time there were only 34 parsonages in the entire Conference, distributed among the districts as follows: Ontario, 11; Seneca Lake, 8; Rochester, 7; Wellsborough, 5; Dansville, 3. But this condition improved rapidly, and when the last report was made—that of 1871—the Conference had 131 parsonages, reported from the several districts as follows: Geneva, 26; Elmira, 24; Penn Yan, 24; Hornellsville, 22; Troy, 19; Rochester, 16. So at the end there were only about fifty pastoral charges without parsonages.

In the report of pastoral support in 1871 it is arranged very differently. There is given the amount of salary allowed, the amount of salary paid, the amount paid for house rent in cases where there is no parsonage, and the amount given in donations. This is the time when the donation idea was in its glory, and nearly every pastor reported something in that column. Some of the amounts, of course, were not large, but thirty charges each made donations of $200 or more, and of this number nine donated $300 or more, the largest donations being Lyons $500, and Canandaigua $600.

In total amount of salary paid, exclusive of house rent or parsonage, the Conference makes a fine showing. 38 charges paid $1,000 or more, only 51 paid less than $700, and only 16 less than $500. The significance of this is most clearly shown by the deadly parallel. Compare the amounts paid in certain districts in the East Genesee Conference in 1871 with the amounts paid by the same districts in the Genesee and Central New York Conferences as given in their latest reports, 1907. In the table below the first column shows the percentage of charges paying $1,000 or more, the second column the percentage paying less than $700, and the third column the percentage paying less than $500. In every instance it is highly complimentary to the East Genesee Conference, but it can hardly be pleasant reading for the churches of to-day.

Of the thirty-eight charges which paid $1,000 or more in 1871, one has been united with a neighboring church, and seventeen others paid last year less than they did thirty-six years before .

Here follows a list of all the charges in East Genesee Conference which in any year paid $1,000 or more for pastoral support, exclusive of house rent or parsonage. It will be observed that this amount was not reached until 1861:

1861—Asbury, Rochester, $1,000—1.

Its Benevolences

The first report of the East Genesee Conference shows collections for three benevolences only: Missions $2704.55, Bibles $1408.56, and Sunday School Books $972.47. This may seem modest, but it was a time when dollars were not plentiful.

The amounts contributed continued to increase, and the number of causes became greater as the benevolent societies organized by the denomination multiplied. That given for the American Bible Society is especially noticeable. It increases until it reaches its maximum of $2792 in 1870, and at the last report, the next year, it was $2527. Either of these sums is considerably more than twice as much as both the great Genesee and East Genesee Conferences combined contributed in 1907.

The amount contributed for Missions reaches its maximum in the centennial year of 1866—$12599, although it is not much below it in 1871—$12115. This latter is $.52 per member. It also contributed $1604 for the Church Extension Society that year. So for the two together the average contribution was $.59 per member. In 1907 for the Board of Foreign Missions and for the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension combined, the Genesee Conference contributed an average of $1.02 per member, and the Central New York Conference $1.16.

The 1871 report shows the following contributions: Missions, from churches, $9308.80; Missions, from Sunday Schools, $2806.24; Church Extension, $1604.38; Tract Society, $492.52; Bible Society, $2527.81; Sunday School Union, $566.34; Freedmen's Aid Society, $249.41.

Among miscellaneous benevolences it ought also to be stated that at the session of the East Genesee Conference held at Elmira in 1870 subscriptions for the new Syracuse University were taken, amounting to $23500, of which sum $13425 was subscribed by the ministers themselves.

Its Schools

GENESEE WESLEYAN SEMINARY.

When the East Genesee Conference was organized there was already a flourishing Conference school within its territory, with about five hundred students—the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima, N. Y.—into the support and control of which it at once entered.

The school had previously been started by the Genesee Conference, and its doors opened for students on May 1, 1832. It was from the first a seminary of high grade, and this at a time when the modern high-school was almost unknown. Prophetic insight was also shown in making it a co-educational institution, at a time when the wisdom of that idea had not yet been established by experience.

The East Genesee Conference, as soon after its organization as legislative action could be secured, began to elect half of the trustees of the Seminary, and in every way shoulder responsibility. Three Principals of the Seminary were members of the East Genesee, and while the Conference lived it furnished the Seminary Treasurer most of the time.

The Principals of the Seminary from the beginning to the present time have been as follows: Samuel Luckey 1832-33-34-35; Lockwood Hoyt, Acting, 1836; Schuyler Seager 1837-38-39-40-41-42-43-44;

George Loomis 1845-46-47; James L. Alverson 1848-49-50; Moses Crow 1851-52-53; Schuyler Seager 1854-55; Charles W. Bennett 1866-67-68; Charles R. Pomeroy 1859; Zenas Hurd 1860-61; William Wells 1862-63; Charles W. Bennett 1864-65; Spencer R. Fuller 1866-67; Herbert F. Fisk 1868-69-70-71-72; George H. GENESEE COLLEGE.

There had previously been talk of securing a college charter for the institution at Lima, and after the East Genesee Conference was organized a new impetus was given to the movement. So in 1849 a charter was obtained for "Genesee College," and the agents soon had pledges amounting to $100,000 secured. The college opened in September, 1850, with a faculty of five, James L. Alverson apparently being acting President. The first regular President was not elected until the following year.

The Genesee College continued as a separate institution for a score of years, doing honorable and valuable work, but it never attained much magnitude. Later it was thought best to found a larger institution at Syracuse, and merge the college into it. The faculty and many of the students went to Syracuse at the opening of the university, but the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima fell heir to the college buildings, to its entire equipment, and to its endowment of over $50,000.

The Presidents of Genesee College were as follows: Benjamin F. Tefft 1851-52-53; Joseph Cummings 1854-55-56-57; John M. Reid 1858-59-60-61-62-63; James L. Alverson, Acting, 1864; John W. Lindsay 1865-66-67; Daniel Steele 1868-69-70.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

The East Genesee Conference entered heartily into the movement to establish a university at Syracuse, and at its session held in Elmira in 1870 made subscriptions for its endowment amounting to $23,500, over half of which was subscribed by members of the Conference. A resolution was passed at the same session to undertake to raise $60,000 for that purpose, and shortly afterward Andrew C. Lindsay, of Rushville, N. Y., gave $25,000 of the amount.

The Syracuse University was opened Aug. 31, 1871, and the wildest dreams of its founders have been more than realized in its magnificent success. Its Chancellors from the beginning have been as follows: Daniel Steele, Acting, 1871; John R. French, Acting, 1872; Alexander Winchell 1873; Erastus O. Haven 1874-75-76-77-78-79-80; Charles N. Sims 1881-82-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-91-92; John R. French, Acting, 1893; James R. Day 1894-95-96-97-98-99-1900-01-02-03-04-05-06-07.

OTHER SCHOOLS.

Besides the schools already mentioned the East Genesee Conference gave its countenance and support to at least five other schools. It elected trustees and visitors to the Rogersville Union Seminary from 1855 to 1858 inclusive; it elected visitors to the Mansfield Seminary from 1855 to its transfer to the State of Pennsylvania for a Normal School Dec. 11, 1862; it elected trustees and visitors for the Walworth Academy from 1855 to 1868 inclusive; it elected trustees and visitors for Dansville Academy from 1858 to 1868 inclusive; and it elected trustees and visitors for the East Genesee Conference Seminary, at Ovio, N. Y., from 1864 until the Conference was dismembered.

During this time the following appointments to the Principalship of these schools was made from among the members of the East Genesee Conference:

Rogersville Union Seminary, William S. Hall 1855; Isaiah McMahon 1856; Philip Crisfield 1864.

Dansville Academy, Schuyler Seager 1858-59-60; John J. Brown 1861-62-63.

Mansfield Seminary, James Landreth 1859.

East Genesee Conference Seminary, John Easter 1867-68-69.

In addition to these, several members of the Conference were appointed from time to time to other institutions of learning, not in any way under Conference control.

Its Insurance

AS early as 1859 the East Genesee Conference undertook to establish an association to insure church and parsonage property. A committee framed a constitution, which the Conference adopted. The title of the organization was "The East Genesee Conference Mutual Aid Association." A Board of Managers, consisting of six ministers and six laymen, was elected. Mr. J. W. Stebbins, of Rochester, was made President; Mr. A. D. Platt, of Geneva, Secretary; and the Rev. J. T. Arnold, of Clyde, Treasurer. It was planned to secure a charter from the Legislature if there should prove to be sufficient co-operation to warrant it. The next year the Conference by resolution urged upon the pastors to present the matter to their church trustees. The subject is not afterward mentioned, so evidently it was not found practicable to go on with the project.

But a different fate awaited an organization to insure the ministers themselves. At the annual session held in Lima in 1860, "The Mutual Aid Society of the East Genesee Conference" was organized, and it was incorporated by special act of the Legislature of the State of New York, passed April 12, 1862. The Society was of the fraternal order, yet did not depend entirely on assessments made on the death of members, but began at once to lay up a permanent fund, the income from which was to be used to meet current expenses and claims. It was arranged so that expenses should be very small, for the offices were to work gratuitously, and there were to be no commissions paid. After the East Genesee Conference was divided between the Genesee and the Central New York Conferences in 1872, it was arranged so that members of either of these two Conferences, not more than forty years of age, could join the Society. Its constitution has been changed somewhat from time to time, as changed conditions and experience have indicated. The growth of the Society, of necessity, has been modest. It took about a quarter of a century to reach the hundred mark, and it is now one hundred and fifty. It pays $1,200 on the death of a member, and makes a yearly dividend to the superannuates in its membership. It has paid seventy beneficiary claims during its history. The permanent fund has now reached the magnificent sum of $13,348, and is steadily piling up. The Mutual Aid Society is the only organization in existence which perpetuates the name of the East Genesee Conference.

Its Treasurers have been as follows: D. W. C. Huntington, 1860-61-62-63-64-65-66-67-68-69-70-71; Porter McKinstry, 1872-73-74-75-76-77-78-79-80; J. T. Brownell, 1881-82-83-84; G. H. Dryer, 1885-86-87-88; E. H. Latimer, 1889- 90-91-92; J. H. Rogers, 1893-94; Ray Allen 1895-96-97-98-99-1900-01-02-03-04-05-06-07.

Its Church Paper

During the entire life of the East Genesee Conference it was closely related to the Northern Christian Advocate, and for half of that time furnished the editor from its membership.

The need of a local church paper for Central and Western New York had been recognized for some years, and the Western Banner, the Auburn Banner, and also the Conference and Family Recorder had been started, but all had been soon discontinued. On March 12, 1841, the Rev. John E. Robie, of the Oneida Conference, a practical printer, began the publication of an independent paper at Auburn, which he called the Northern Advocate. He arranged with the Rev. Freeborn C. Hibbard, of the Genesee Conference, to act as editor while serving as pastor at Penn Yan. After a year and a half Dr. Hibbard resigned, on account of the pressure of other duties, and the Rev. William Hosmer, also of the Genesee Conference, was secured as editor. The paper made encouraging progress, and in 1844 the proprietor sold out to the Methodist Book Concern, and it became an official paper of the church, under the name now of the Northern Christian Advocate. It was removed to Syracuse in 1872, but it has retained the name until the present day. Its ownership was in the Methodist Book Concern and its editors elected by the General Conference until 1900, since which time it has again been independent.

The year the East Genesee Conference was organized the Rev. William Hosmer, then in its membership, was elected editor, and served for two quadrenniums. He was followed by Dr. Hibbard, also of the East Genesee Conference. The influence which the paper exerted throughout the territory no man can estimate, and probably no Conference profited by it more than did the East Genesee.

Its editors have been as follows: Freeborn G. Hibbard, Genesee Conference, 1841-42; William Hosmer, Genesee Conference, 1843; Nelson Rounds, Oneida Conference, 1844-45-46-47; William Hosmer, East Genesee Conference, 1848-49-50-51-52-53-54-55; Freeborn G. Hibbard, East Genesee Conference, 1856-57-58-59; Isaac S. Bingham, Black River Conference, 1860-61-62-63; Dallas D. Lore, Genesee Conference first four years, then transferred to the Central New York Conference, 1864-65-66-67-68-69-70-71-72-73-74; Orris H. Warren, Central New York Conference, 1875-76-77-78-79-80-81-82-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-91; James E. C. Sawyer, Troy Conference, 1892-93-94-95-96-97-98-99; Mr. Bennett E. Titus, 1900-01-02-03-04-05; Liston H. Pearce, Central New York Conference, 1906-07.

Of these Dr. Rounds died Jan. 2, 1874; Dr. Lore June 10, 1875, while editor; Dr. Hosmer June 19, 1889; Dr. Bingham April 20, 1893; Dr. Hibbard Jan. 27, 1895; and Dr. Warren Nov. 23, 1901.

Dr. Sawyer is now pastor at Slingerlands, N. Y., in the Troy Conference, Mr. Titus is resident in Syracuse, N. Y., and Dr. Pearce is still editor, sending out a paper replete with local news and devoted to all the interests of the church.

Its Notables

The only person living who was a member of the East Genesee Conference at its organization in 1848 is John Knapp, who is an honored superannuate of the Genesee Conference, and is residing at Prattsburg, N. Y. and is in his ninety-second year.

The oldest person who died while a member of the East Genesee Conference was Cyrus Story, who reached the age of ninety-one years, one month and eleven days.

Among those who ever belonged to the East Genesee Conference the one to reach the greatest age, as far as known, was James Hemingway, who died when ninety-three years, two months and ten days old.

The only East Geneseean who ever became a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church was Isaac W. Wiley. He was received on trial August 23, 1850, and transferred to the Philadelphia Conference five days later.

The first member of East Genesee Conference to die was Parker Buell, at Wayland, N. Y., May 30, 1851.

The following were members of the East Genesee Conference continuously throughout its existence from 1848 to its dismemberment Sept. 1, 1872, and such as are indicated by a star* were also members at its reorganization and consolidation with the

Genesee Conference in 1876: Joseph Ashworth*, A. S. Baker*, N. N. Beers*, Jonathan Benson*, C. L. Bown*, William Bradley*, J. J. Brown*, J. N. Brown*, Veranus Brownell, D. D. Its End

CONFERENCE boundaries in central and western New York had come to be in a very unsettled condition. The General Conference of 1868 made extensive readjustments, the Northern New York appearing as the successor of the Black River, and the Central New York as the successor of the Oneida, both with great changes in boundaries, involving also the Wyoming. No little dissatisfaction ensued, particularly in the Northern New York.

The Conferences undertook to right matters at the General Conference of 1872 at Brooklyn. First a resolution passed giving back to the Northern New York all the territory formerly belonging to the Black River, but this left the Central New York seriously crippled, as part of its Oneida territory had been given to the Wyoming four years before. So the situation was now acute. The following commission was appointed, with Bishop Andrews as chairman, "to consider the subject of Conference boundaries in central New York:" Genesee, R. L. Waite, E. E. Chambers; East Genesee, Robert Hogoboom, Thomas Tousey; Central New York, A. J. Phelps, B. I. Ives; Northern New York, I. S. Bingham, L. L. Palmer; Wyoming, Reuben Nelson, W. G. Queal.

The report of this commission, which was adopted in spite of strong opposition by East Geneseeans, re-arranged the territory of the five Conferences into four Conferences, giving to the Genesee the new name of Western New York, and obliterating the East Genesee entirely, its territory being divided between the Central New York and the Western New York. K. P. Jervis got a resolution through providing that the action should not become operative for the destruction of the East Genesee Conference until the First of September.

As East Genesee had never desired nor expected such an end the grief and consternation can be imagined. Over seventy of its members signed a call for a convention, which met at Mt. Morris Aug. 13, 1872, Bishop Simpson being present by request, and presiding. The roll call showed one hundred four members, seven probationers, and seven lay delegates present. The convention was nearly helpless, but it passed a series of resolutions, and memorialized the next General Conference to restore the East Genesee with its original boundaries, and appointed a commission to take charge of the matter: D. D. Buck, D. W. C. Huntington, O. L. Gibson, John Dennis, William Bradley and A. F. Morey. On March 21, 1876 these commissioners selected two of their number—one from the Western New York and one from the Central New York, to personally attend the General Conference in the interests of the memorial. These two were John Dennis and D. D. Buck.

But, of course, memorials and protests could not affect the action of the General Conference which had already adjourned, and so on September 1, 1872, the East Genesee Conference ceased to be, and left no successor.

The General Conference of 1876 met in Baltimore, and the struggle was soon renewed. The outcome was that on May 31 a report of the Committee on Boundaries was adopted reading as follows: "East Genesee Conference shall be bounded on the west by the Genesee river, including the city of Rochester, in the state of New York; on the north by Lake Ontario; on the east by a line beginning at Sodus Bay and running south on the east line of the towns of Sodus and Lyons, in Wayne county, and the east line of Ontario county to Seneca Lake, thence southward up said lake to Watkins, thence south to the New York state line, leaving the charges of Watkins, Havana, Millport and Horseheads in Central New York Conference. It shall also include the territory in the state of Pennsylvania known as the Troy District."

So the East Genesee Conference was again in existence, but not with as much territory as before. A large slice had been taken from the east side, and nobody was satisfied. The first session of the East Genesee Conference after this reconstruction was held in the Asbury Church, Rochester, on Oct. 4, 1876. The Western New York Conference, its friendly relative, met in LeRoy the same day, and appointed G. W. Paddock, K. D. Nettleton, A. F. Morey, R. C. Brownlee and Sandford Hunt a commission to take the boundary question into consideration. The East Genesee appointed as a commission for the same purpose K. P. Jervis, F. G. Hibbard, William Bradley, George VanAlstyne and Ransley Harrington.

These ten commissioners met in Rochester Oct. 5, elected F. G. Hibbard as chairman and Sandford Hunt as secretary, and unanimously adopted the following: "Resolved, that the division boundary between the East Genesee and Western New York Conferences be removed and made to coincide with the eastern boundary of the East Genesee Conference, and that the territory thus united shall be called the Genesee Conference."

Both Conferences approved the action of the Commissioners, and the East Genesee telegraphed the Western New York an invitation to meet with them in Rochester. The invitation was promptly accepted, and the Western New Yorkers arrived Friday afternoon, Oct. 6, and were joyfully welcomed. A joint session was held at four o'clock, formal action uniting the two Conferences under the name of Genesee was taken, the two presiding Bishops, Simpson and Ames concurred, and the grand old East Genesee again ceased to exist—this time not in sorrow, but with rejoicing.
